

FLOATING RATE HIGH INCOME FUND

December 31, 2025

INVESTMENT PHILOSOPHY

The investment strategy is to seek to maximize risk-adjusted returns by investing in primarily first lien, senior secured, floating rate bank loans of non-investment grade (i.e., high yield) companies. The Shenkman Capital Floating Rate High Income Fund employs a conservative approach which focuses on principal preservation. Portfolios are well diversified across issue, issuer, and industry.

MONTHLY COMMENTARY

The leveraged loan market, as measured by the Morningstar LSTA U.S. Leveraged Loan Index, returned 1.22% in the fourth quarter, marking a 14th consecutive quarterly gain. Strong collateralized loan obligation (CLO) creation and low default rates continued to provide carry and technical support even as benchmark rates eased. Returns by rating showed a quality bias in favor of higher-rated loans: BB and B rated loans rose 1.47% and 1.40%, respectively while the riskier CCC & below rated loans returned -3.56%. Breadth was solid, with 55 of 62 industries posting positive returns. IT Services, Specialty Retail, and Biotechnology led while Automobile Components, Building Products, and Household Products lagged.

Primary activity subsided in the fourth quarter with $171.3 coming to market versus $372.3 billion in the second quarter. Net CLO formation totaled $53.0 billion, roughly in-line with the previous quarter, while retail flows turned negative at -$4.5 billion, continuing the mixed trend from earlier in the year.

Four loan issuers defaulted during the quarter, affecting $5.7 billion of principal. The JPMorgan trailing 12-month par-weighted default rate ended the quarter at 1.46% versus a long-run average near 3%. Including distressed exchanges and other liability-management activity, the rate stood at 2.87%.

Global investors continue to shift focus toward underlying macroeconomic conditions, with particular attention on a gradually cooling labor market and inflation that remains elevated and uneven across categories. Following the conclusion of the federal government shutdown and the associated data blackout, incoming economic releases have taken on heightened importance. Current data points to a moderating but still resilient U.S. economy, with slower jobs growth and trade-impacted gross domestic product (GDP) readings reinforcing a narrative of consistent growth rather than outright contraction. As a result, each incremental release continues to play an outsized role in shaping policy expectations and market pricing.

After delivering three consecutive 25 basis points (bps) rate cuts, the Fed reiterated a firmly data-dependent stance, though the upcoming Fed chair nomination is likely to warrant significant attention while market pricing continues to reflect expectations for additional easing in 2026. At the same time, policy risk has broadened beyond monetary considerations, as executive actions and geopolitical developments increasingly contribute to rate volatility and influence risk sentiment across credit markets.

U.S. leveraged loan market continued to exhibit relative resilience, supported by elevated coupons, and the floating-rate nature of the asset class has helped insulate performance amid ongoing rate and policy uncertainty. While Treasury yields were somewhat more volatile late in the year, loan market returns remained anchored by carry, with price dispersion largely driven by issuer-specific fundamentals rather than broad market stress. Primary market activity remained elevated through the second half of the year, further extending maturity profiles and alleviating near-term refinancing risk. Defaults remain below long-term averages, with realized losses contained by strong recoveries and ample capital markets access for higher-quality borrowers. Importantly, default activity has remained largely idiosyncratic rather than systemic, reinforcing the importance of credit selection. As the market moves into 2026 and carry remains the dominant return driver, we believe issuer selection, capital-structure positioning, and sector-level dispersion will remain central to relative performance in a more normalized credit environment.

Mutual fund investing involves risk. Principal loss is possible. There can be no assurance that the Fund will achieve its stated objective. In addition to the normal risks associated with investing, bonds and bank loans, and the funds that invest in them are subject to interest rate risk and can be expected to decline in value as interest rates rise. Investment by the Fund in lower-rated and non-rated securities presents a greater risk of loss to principal and interest than higher-rated securities. Diversification does not assure a profit, nor does it protect against a loss in a declining market. The SEC does not endorse, indemnify, approve nor disapprove of any security.

The Fund invests in foreign securities which involve political, economic and currency risks, greater volatility and differences in accounting methods. Derivatives may involve certain costs and risks such as liquidity, interest rate, market, credit, management, and the risk that a position could not be closed when most advantageous. Leverage may cause the effect of an increase or decrease in the value of the portfolio securities to be magnified and the fund to be more volatile than if leverage was not used. Investments in CLOs carry additional risks, including the possibility that distributions from collateral securities will not be adequate to make interest payments and that the quality of the collateral may decline in value or default.

The indices mentioned are unmanaged, not available for direct investment and do not reflect deductions for fees or expenses.

Must be preceded or accompanied by a prospectus. The Fund's investment objectives, risks, charges and expenses must be considered carefully before investing.
